CONCERT AT KAWAIAHAO.

A Well Rendered Programme Pleases the Audience.

An enjoyable concert was given at Kawaiahao Church on Saturday evening last by the Hui Mele Hawaii Noeau. The programme was a good one, and most of the numbers on it were enthusiastically received. The piano solos by Miss Hopper and Miss Castle were artistically played, and the efforts of these ladies were much appre-

Miss Nolte made her first public appearance in some time, and she was greeted most cordially by the audience. She sang her solos in a charming manner.

Mr. Wakefield sang a baritone solo in his usual spirited style. Miss Burgess favored the audience with a brilliant selection. and as a reward she was enthusiastically recalled.

The members of the Hawaiian National Band sang native songs acceptably, and for an encore they gave "Aloha Oe." The members found favor with the audience.

Miss May Cummins sang a solo, and later she appeared with Mr. Booth, and a pretty duet was well rendered.

Messrs. Ordway, Cuelho and Barsoti appeared and added their share

DISLIKE THE BADGES.

Reported Outrages Committed on Respectable People.

Several assaults have been reported, and natives are charged with committing them. The most serious one occurred on Thursday night on Punchbowl street, in the rear of the Hospital. An aged Portuguese citizen and his son were sitting on the veranda of their home when a gang of natives came along, and, without any provocation, they commenced to assault the inoffensive couple. The old gentleman was severely handled, with the result that he is now laid up. The police were notified, but the perpetrators of the outrage have not been arrested. The assaulted ones had annexation badges on, and the little ribbons enraged the natives.

A similar outrage took place on the same afternoon near the Fish Market. A Portuguese, who happened to be in the vicinity of the place mentioned, he was set upon by some natives because he had an annexation club badge pinned to his coat.

THE NATIVE PRESS.

Sparks from the Native Version of the Holomua.

Commissioner Blount is going to go around among you native Hawaiians, to ask you your ideas about your mother country. And do not forget while you are about it to give a few presents (Hookupu) a few eggs, chickens, and so forth.

In giving an account of an interview of its secretary with Commissioner Blount, in which the Commissioner is made to say everything of course favorable to the Royalist cause, the article reads: "The great gift given to the Holomua was his order to have that paper put on his table every day, on account of his great wish to see a genuine native newspaper, and that he would in a few days give some startling news.

The English version of the Holomua says there were 2000 people at the Palace Square meeting; the native version of the same paper sets the number at 8000.

One of the native papers says that when Commissioner Blount saw the native women down on the wharf with their flags he was so affected by the patriotic demonstration that he turned and shed a silent tear.

Blount's Mission.

In sending Mr. Blount on a still hunt to Hawaii, President Cleveland runs the risk of making hard work of what might be an easy job. That we want Hawaii for high commercial and strategical reasons is beyond question. Instead of catching the prize as it drops into his hand, Mr. Cleveland lets it roll on the ground while he speculates on the attraction of gravitation. When gravitation throws Hawaii into our hands, our first business is to eatch it. There will be plenty of time afterward to philosophize on the matter. If Mr. Blount goes to Hawaii to hunt opposition to annexation, he can no doubt find it. known furnishing sustenance to both brain | He will find it at the British Consulate and among the foreign and native hangers-on and place-hunters who look to Hawaiian Toyalty Francisco prices at the GAZETTE for poi and pickings .- S. #### PIRATES IN PRISON.

The Hesper Murderers in High Spirits.

The following is taken from the San Francisco Chronicle of a late date. It refers to the notorious crew of the bark Hesper, the particulars of whose bloody act has appeared in the ADVERTISER:

Among the inmates of the County Jail yesterday there were none better natured or more jovial than the five sailors charged with the murder of Morris Fitzgerald, second mate of the bark Hesper, who was killed on the high seas by a mutinous crew. The five pirates to a man declared that the city and county was giving them better fare than they had been getting at sea, and besides this they found no little pleasure in stretching legs and arms that had been so long in irons.

The jail officials deemed it advisable to separate the prisoners. Thos. St. Clair, the leader of the gang who sought to kill off the Hesper's officers and become a pirate chief, was put into a cell by himself. Herman Sparf, St. Clair's willing lieutenant, was in an adjoining cell. Hans of the society contributed choruses Hansen, who stood by with Sparf from the "Bohemian Girl," which when St. Clair brained the second mate, and Thomas Green were in a cell directly across the corridor. Edward Larson was thrown into a cell with two other murderers.

Not one of the prisoners seems to appreciate the enormity of the crime charged. They talked freely yesterday of the murder, and laughed over towards the success of the evening. their failure to secure the Hesper and convert her into a pirate craft. Among the five men, however, there is no intellect, too dull to attempt to throw the burden of the crime upon other heads. St. Clair, in his talk, insists that the murder of Fitzgerald was the result of a conspiracy favored by every sailor in the forecastle. On the other hand, his four accomplices declare that he was the leading spirit and that it was he who planned and executed the murder.

Hansen told a reporter that the idea of killing the bark's officers was first mooted about two weeks after the vessel cleared from the port of Newcastle. St. Clair began the talk. He and Sparf then exhibited two re volvers and an ax. This was during a talk in the forecastle at night time, when the watch below was complain-ing of ill treatment. Sparf, Hansen says, declared that they ought to do away with the second mate.
"I told them," said Hansen, "that I did not have the heart to do it. 'If you fellows are so brave,' I said, 'why don't you go ahead and do it?" " "T'm not afraid to do it,' St. Clair said, 'and I'll suffer the consequences, Hansen declares that there was no talk then about killing the captain, the mate or the carpenter. He says also that he believed the talk about killing Fitzgerald to be all a joke until the night of the murder, when St. Clair told him that it had to be done before morning. He admits, though, that he entered into the conspiracy and that during the watch he went forward to cut the royal sheet, this being St. Clair's scheme to bring the about a foot. This brought Fitzgerald forward to his death. After the murder the other mutineers weakened. St. Clair and Sparf, Hansen says, were the only men will ing to carry out the murderous plans. Thomas Green, one of the conspirators, ran into the forecastle and stayed there until he was called out by the captain, when he told the second mate forward. He did not cut the sheet, he says, but slacked it away master the whole story of the con-spiracy and the murder. Green declares that he is innocent and that he should not have been put in irons.

Now that the means have been provided, the TARO FLOUR is made more valuable to the tourist who journies by sea. #### A Good One on Jimmie.

An amusing incident occurred on the Rush the other day when ex-Major, ex-Chamberlain Jimmie Robertson went out to welcome the United States Commissioner. Jimmie, as is well-known, rejoices in a bronzed skin, and when his manly countenance came into Colonel Blount's view, the latter said, "Are you one of the kanakas?"

The reply was sotto voce, and escaped the reporter's ear.
